HISTORIC FLAG INCIDENTS

Barbara Frietchie and The Flag

Here we show the main incident in the story of Dame Barbara Frietchie, who, gray-haired old woman though she was, feared not to flaunt the beloved Stars and Stripes in the very faces of the enemies of her country as they marched through the streets of Fredericktown.

That the rebel leader, General Stonewall Jackson, recognized and honored her act as one of extreme bravery and patriotism, is shown by the lines of the verse in which he says: "Who harms one hair of yon gray head Dies like a dog; march on," he said.

Occasions constantly arise in every village and municipality when every patriotic American citizen should SHOW THE COLORS. Upon every national holiday and upon occasions of a purely local nature, the Stars and Stripes, floating to the breeze from every house and flagstaff, lends color to the occasion and fosters a spirit of patriotism as well.

TO RE-ENACT DEATH SCENE

Prosecution Plans to Depict
Its Theory of Marian Lambert's End

DEFENSE WILL TRY TO PREVENT IT

School Boy and Girl Actors
Are to Be Used in Portrayal

Waukegan, Ill., May 23.—The tragedy in Helm's woods, where Marian Lambert died, will be re-enacted before Will Orpet's eyes in the court room here if the dramatic plans of State's Attorney Dady and his assistants are carried to completion.

Marian Lambert's last hour will be made vividly clear to the boy defendant and a crowded court room of spectators under the direction of Assistant Prosecutor David R. Joslyn. School boy and girl actors will take part in this dramatization of the tragedy.

The prosecutor plans to frame the cast from Marian Lambert's high school boy and girl friends. One will take the part of Will Orpet, another of Marian Lambert, and still another of Josephine Vose, Marian's closest friend and confidant. Under Joslyn's direction, the youthful cast will portray Marian gaily leaving her home for school with Josephine and show her happy frolicking manner as she left her parents for the last time. He will lead her to the spot in the woods where Will Orpet lurked behind the tree. Irwin Clow may be asked to play the part of Orpet. Joslyn will show Marian bidding Josephine goodbye and meeting Orpet. He will trace the walk through the snow to the three oaks. The witness stand will represent the trees near where Marian died. Here the death scene will be reproduced, that is the state's version of how Marian Lambert breathed her last. This is counted on to make a tremendous impression on the jury.

The actors in this strange drama have not yet been definitely selected, but no trouble will be encountered in enlisting the aid of Marian's high school friends on the side of the state, it is said. They believe Will Orpet is guilty, and are willing to do what they can to prove it. It is certain the defense will make a hard fight to prevent the admission of this kind of evidence. If it is permitted they will undoubtedly ask Orpet to re-enact his version of it.

Marian had no thought of suicide on the day she met Orpet in Helm's woods, Josephine Davis, Marian's closest chum, who will be a principal witness for the state at the trial, declared yesterday.

"Marian knew that her worries over her physical condition were at an end," Miss Davis said, "and she realized that her love for Orpet had grown cold. She had determined to forget her romance with Will. She was not even jealous of Will's reported engagement to Celeste Youker. The last thing Marian would have thought of was suicide."

It is hoped by counsel for both state and defense to have the trial actually under way Friday.

Building a Strong Body.

A writer in a certain health magazine has the following to say in regard to various exercises for the building up of a strong body:

"Walking is nature's exercise, and is a splendid health giver if properly done. To get good results one must take position—high head, lifted chest, indrawn chin—and must enjoy the walk. Walking against time, nervous and anxious, or with a mind filled with cares, does little good. Leave worry at home and breast the invisible tides of air with vigorous stride and hearty enjoyment. If position be not taken, the body will fall into some habitual attitude—bent and unhealthy, but easy, and the strong leg muscles, which need no exercise, are the only ones that get any. Whereas, by striking position hard, for say, five minutes every quarter of an hour and keeping an upright carriage, all the trunk muscles, loin, shoulder, back, chest and abdominal, are at work, as the beginner soon realizes.

"Practice long and steady breathing at the same time. Swing from the hips. Keep a set of underwear for walking, and good strong boots, and do not be afraid of a good fast walk of four, five or six hours, when you have a free day. It will open the pores, clear your mind, invigorate your body, teach you something about nature and put you in good humor with yourself and the world. Never slouch along a road. It will make you tired physically and mentally. When going for a long walk it is a good plan never to change your pace once you get going. When the walk is ended, change and rub down with a rough towel. If any tiredness be felt a few minutes of steady massage will remove it and prevent subsequent stiffness.

"Some will complain that they have not the time necessary for walking. Let such drop all car fare money into the poor box and walk wherever and whenever they possibly can, and the mileage they will cover in a year will astonish them. A healthy appetite and good digestion and sound, brain-refreshing sleep will follow such exercise. It is an exercise that can be made strenuous enough to keep the strongest in condition, and yet is so easy that anyone, even the weakest, may indulge in it with benefit. A medical doctor says of it: 'Walking as an exercise is without question the least injurious and can be made the most universally beneficial of all outdoor sports. It is suitable for all ages. It is within

Why Suffer From Migraine or Sick Headache?

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two anti-kamnia tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one anti-kamnia tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet. Anti-kamnia tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all pain.

SCALE COVERED DAUGHTER'S FACE

Lose Eyesight. Itched Continually. Disfigured Terribly.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"When my daughter was four weeks old she had a dreadful scale which covered her face and head, and we thought for a time she would lose her eyesight. At first the skin was inflamed; and it itched continually and she could not sleep day or night. At last little red pimples with festering heads appeared and when the pimples had been, there would appear a horrid scale. It disfigured her terribly.

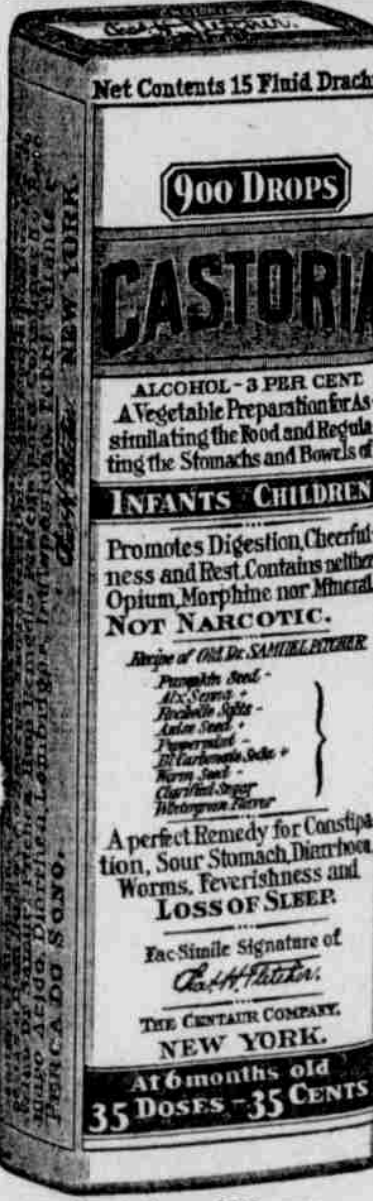

"Then I thought I would try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the third application we could see a marked improvement, and in a short time she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Geo. Paddock, New Canaan, Conn., July 24, 1915.
